YEAR BOOK

OF THE

CLASS of 1942

MEMORIAL HIGH SCHOOL

MIDDLEBORO, MASSACHUSETTS

To

Leonard O. Tillson

If there is one person that we, the class of 1942, should like most to remember out of the many we grew to know at Memorial High School, it is Mr. Tillson. We shall forever be grateful for his guidance, instruction, and friendship. Those who had him as a teacher in chemistry or physics were indeed fortunate and will not soon forget either what he taught or his manner of teaching, but all of us are the richer for having known him. Mr. Tillson was an educator for over forty-two years. We, the last class to benefit as seniors from his rare teaching and friendly interest, consider it fitting that we dedicate our yearbook to him.

History of the Class of 1942

ALTON KRAMER

When the class of 1942 entered the stately portals of this institution of learning, the size of the structure and the attitude of the upper classmen toward us made us wary of what was in store for the future. But after several months of getting acquainted with the building and its contents, we elected the following class officers to be our leaders: president, John Dunn; vice-president, Carol Cushing; secretary, Arleen Kinsman; and treasurer, Marcia Brooks, who left our high school at the end of the freshman year to enter Plymouth high school.

After a successful season of selling candy at football and basketball games, the class decided to stop making money for the remainder of the year, because the treasurer was in the market for an adding machine. Rather than spend all that money, we settled the question by simply not doing any more business until our sophomore year.

When the good news arrived that we were to become sophomores, it became our turn to sit back and watch the frightened freshmen running around like scared rabbits. Now we had the opportunity to see how the newcomers look when trying to find rooms 31 and 32 down near the boilers.

As it is customary to elect sophomore class officers, we followed suit, and the students who held the regal reins of our household were as follows: president, Thomas Cleverly; vice-president, Warren Tharion; secretary, Arleen Kinsman; and treasurer, Ruth Leonard.

The main event of our sophomore year was Miss Erickson's buying a 1937 model Chevrolet to replace her antiquated "Leaping Lena." According to the latest reports she still has that so-called car in her back yard. Without doubt she has become so attached to it that she just can't part with it. If she can keep it from falling apart for several more years, she may get an offer from the Smithsonian Institute in Washington.

In September, 1940, we resumed our studies as juniors, and a host of new teachers were here to greet us.

Miss Merrill of Somerville replaced Miss Chase as the Junior English teacher; Miss Purkis replaced Miss Smith as Sociology and Business-English teacher; Miss Cummings replaced Miss Merselis as the Problems of Democracy teacher; and Mr. Sturtevant came as the instructor in the new courses in agriculture.

The 1940 football season officially marked the opening of the new locker room. This masterpiece in lockerroom technique was engineered and built mainly through the efforts of our football coach Mr. Battis. There are very few schools in the state that can match this addition to our school facilities, and we hope that it will serve future classes as capably as it has served the class of 1942.

Although we never got around to holding a junior social, our junior prom was the outstanding event of the year. The excellent orchestra and the gate receipts made this attraction one of the best in recent years.

Our junior class officers were: president, Thomas Cleverly; vice-president, Richard Leggee; secretary, Arleen Kinsman; and treasurer, Lorraine Leighton.

This, our last year as members of the M. H. S. student body, has been a pleasant one.

Our officers for the year were elected as follows: president, Paul Anderson; vice-president, John Swanson; secretary, Arleen Kinsman; and treasurer, Lorraine Leighton.

The big event of the football season was the dedication of the football field, to be known as Battis Field. The locker room and the football field with the grandstand stand as proof of the interest shown by Mr. Battis in our high school boys and sports. Certainly no finer tribute could be paid him than naming the field in his honor.

One new teacher joined the faculty ranks in the fall. Miss Keil took the place of Miss Cummings as the Problems of Democracy teacher. Miss Cummings changed her position to that of Sophomore English teacher, taking the place of Miss Clutton, who left in June 1941. After the Christmas recess our faculty was joined by more new members. Mr. Whitmore came to us as Physics and Chemistry teacher: Miss Allbee replaced Miss Cummings as the Sophomore English teacher: and Mr. Ashworth replaced Mr. Maynard as Senior English teacher.

When classes were resumed after the Thanksgiving recess in November, the entire school and town was shocked to learn of the sudden passing of our beloved teacher and friend, Mr. Tillson. He was a true friend to each of us, and his love of his work made him the most popular and best liked teacher in the school. His greatness lay in his sincerity and simplicity. He will live on in the minds of all of us as a man who stood for honor, truth, and sincerity of thought and purpose.

The highlight of the social season was the senior class presentation of the outstanding play, "You Can't Take It With You." The play was a smash hit with an excellent cast. Mr. Ashworth did a fine piece of directing, even though the play was very difficult to put on.

We admit in closing that the four years we have spent in Memorial High have been very profitable to us. Many of us who at the present do not keenly appreciate what the faculty has done in giving us our high school education, will in years to come, as we grow older and wiser, look back and realize how important this milestone in our lives has been.

With best wishes to the faculty and all future classes, we turn the keys to the building over to the Class of 1943.

The Last Will and Testament of the Class of '42

J. JAMISON KENDALL

We, the Seniors of Memorial High, being of sound mind and worse judgment, taking the burden of life upon our shoulders and realizing its uncertainty, do make, in a dying gasp for fresh air, this our last will and testament, declaring all like documents null and void. We hereby bequeath, to wit—

We bequeath to the fishermen of the Junior Class our "sporting tackle." May they use it to good advantage on April 15, 1943.

To Robert Smith, our promising young clock-maker, we do leave the task of repairing the school clocks, so that the future pupils of M. H. S. may know whether they are coming or going. (We hope!)

To the future stars of the Senior Play we leave DePinna's togs and Penny's star performance, to insure their success, financially and otherwise.

For some rainy school day we leave to the up-and-coming students of Memorial High two dozen pails, seven umbrellas, four life-preservers, two moth-eaten bathing suits, and one row-boat.

To the Science Department of Memorial High we leave the "magnetism" of Jean and Joan Alden.

We leave to the honorable Mr. Raymond "Patrick" Hyman our thirteen pairs of orange stockings.

To any student who considers himself a man, we leave the "Archduke's" pipe and silky mustache.

We do leave and bequeath to "Matrimonial Al" Farley a book entitled "Two Can Live as Cheaply as One."

To Donald "Beanpole" Foye we do leave George "Blimp" Raymond's comely curves.

We most cheerfully do give and bequeath to the first tramp passing through Middleboro (poor fellow!) that slightly used personality of Bob Fish, the Superman physique of Maynard Washburn, and Dick Glidden's ability to throw Ferdinand and all his relatives.

In all sincerity, to the teachers of Memorial High we wish to pass on "Spike" Tillson's homely virtues, his common sense, his just decisions, his love of mankind, and his strength of character.

On this day of June the sixteenth, in this year of our Lord, one thousand, nine hundred and forty-two, we, the undersigned, do asphyxiate our signatures in witness to the above document, decreed and sealed by the Senior Class of '42.

The Prophecy of the Class of 1942

MARGARET BEGLEY CAROL CUSHING

GORDON HASKELL LORRAINE LEIGHTON

Gordon "Hat" Haskell went on the stage after leaving high school. He's now starring in "One Foot in Heaven," — or — "A Miss Is as Good as a Mile."

Roger Quelle has just completed his latest book (an autobiography), "Still Waters Run Deep."

Ruthy Bell always did have a weakness for figures. She's married to Freddie now, and latest reports tell us that she is playing the stock market.

Elinor McLeod is doing all right for herself. Since the War she has continued driving a Mac and Ken—zie!

Dickie Glidden, that super-duper-ice-cream-scuper, is still dishing out the same old "goo." He has three girls and a boy.

Harold Panesis, the now-famous Banana King, has devised a new method of growing bananas without skins. He's not slipping!

Bill Dooley has just been appointed foreman of a large munitions factory. Well, he always wanted to get a big bang out of life.

"Bud" Matthews is now employed as chief engineer for Maxim. What co-operation!

Nobody would ever miss Connie Souza's "Advice to the Love-Lorn" column. She takes care of the hearts and darts while her suitors throw the knives!

Virginia Taylor is head dietitian at the Toll House. Guess she's already heard that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach."

Rose Martin opened a dress shop on Fifth Avenue not so long ago. She copies her styles exclusively from Esquire.

Lesley Graham is teaching agriculture up at Mass. State. Everybody insists on weeding potatoes for her. — How does she do it?

George Raymond went into the belt-making industry after leaving M. H. S. Now we hear he is having a terrible time trying to make both ends meet.

Betty Mitchell has become an undertaker. She hopes we all will come down and spend a quiet evening in her parlor sometime.

Eve Fuller runs a beauty parlor. She specializes in pedicures and claims she's a foot ahead of everybody else.

Mary Mackiewicz runs a watch factory, but says she's having difficulty keeping up to the times.

Doris Craig took up nursing as a career and is doing exceptionally well. She just pulled her mother-in-law through an almost fatal operation.

Virginia Nourse has opened a live-bait stand; but, confidentially, we think she'd have better luck with Minnows.

Ethel Fickert is married, but she is still employed in the Globe Building. She tells us she's sitting on top of the world.

Gen Kinney married shortly after leaving high school. She changed her name to Gen. Ken-ney Gates.

Jim Kendall, our South Seas missionary, is doing wonderful work on Oily Oily Island, converting the natives. Latest reports are that he is very much wrapped up in his work.

To date we read in "Believe It or Not" that Wendell Holmes has put on another 100 pounds and is one hockey star that swings a mean stick.

Catherine Green left last month to become a missionary in Africa. A letter tells us that she has high hopes, but just now things look pretty black.

The Alden Twins are starring in that much talked of Broadway show entitled "Footprints in the Sand." We understand they gained the role through their previous experience in "Life."

June Morris an artist! Her only complaint is that she has a hard time keeping out of the red.

Barbara Roberts is secretary for M. M. H. S.. Men, Mice, and Health Society.

Elizabeth Shaw, who went to Bridgewater Normal, is now on the staff of M. H. S. She is teaching foreign languages — English, etc.

We are all very proud of Doris Sturgis, who is starring in the opera "Barber of Seville," or "A Close Shave in M. H. S."

Alice Zakarian has a knitting mill. She also gives knitting instructions. Her motto is "A stitch in time saves nine hundred."

News has reached us that Arleen Kinsman is the manager of a date bureau out in California, and incidentally, she is doing a thriving business. When the girls become anxious over their suitors, Arleen says, "If I can't date your man, nobody can."

Mamie Mackiewicz is the local Florence Nightingale, doing her bit right at home at St. Luke's. Did Florence Nightingale have a way with the soldiers, too?

Ruthie Pendleton and her "Red" have flown the world and have finally landed out of the clouds long enough to set up a school for young aviators here at home. They say she makes a swell co-pilot.

Betty LeBlanc and Betty DeMoranville are running rival booking agencies for the Narragansett Race Track. The sign on one door reads, "I Bet-ty wins!" On the other agency door there is "I Bet-ty doesn't!" Can't you get together?

We never got to know Richard Hurd very well in school, but we have HEARD that he is a successful farmer. We knew he'd make good.

Anita Young, one of our tiny friends, has used that asset to a great advantage. She models clothes in a local Children's Dress Shoppe, which she now owns.

Sylvia Perkins is rivaling the famous Duchess of Windsor as the world's best dressed woman. Is it a coincidence that they each have a Duke?

Elaire Alexander — (this is poetry, if anyone can tell) —
Because her name has world renown,
She is now the Queen of Dahliatown.
There's a lot more in life than just making money;
So she's added a Gill to make things more sunny.

Joan Berry — (more poetry) —
The nicest clothes and the nicest way
Brought Jo a proposal every day.
She shopped around till the right one she found,
And now she's doing things up Brown.

Paul Anderson is doing business on a large scale. He buys everything by the Gross.

"Dick" Barnett is making a living with other people's feet. He doesn't cut them off; he's a shoe man.

Alvin Bigelow is a tree surgeon. He says he can't get Wood off his mind.

Alan DeMoranville is testing cars for the government. "Al" says they have to be good to stand his driving.

John Johnson is a noted singer. His theme song is "I Dream of Jeannie."

"Bob" Leary is an up-and-coming jeweler. It all started with a Pearl.

Harold Card's ambition was to be a teacher. He is making good, training seals.

"Bob" Fuller makes his money in chips. No, he's not a gambler. They are wood chips, and he is the toothpick king.

"Jim" Francis and "Stan" Griniewicz work with steel. They pound nails in army shoes.

"Ken" Tribou could make a swell pilot, but he can't come out of the tailspin that Millie Cushing put him in.

Shirley Westgate is all ready to settle down. She has finally received her Grant.

"Carl" Shaw is a great sportsman. Right now he is at the Sportmen's Show, showing his midget tuna.

"Modest Charlie" Varney is taking life easy as a shoe-shine boy. Remember, at M. H. S. he used to practice on his basketball shoes. Wood is attracted better by shining ones.

Warren Tharion didn't make a hockey star, but he is a hockey coach. How many games did the gals win last season? "Wann."

Larry Carter has replaced Tommy Dorsey as the country's number one virtuoso, swinging his way into the hot band world and the girls' hearts. Is there a doctor in the house?

Tom Cleverly traveled the world as captain of the S. S. Bachelor, but had to abandon that ship on a matter of principles. He has just set sail on the sea of matrimony.

Dot Cowan was our female Krupa in school. She has drummed her way to fame and the title of Miss North Middleboro.

Peg Begley is teaching little ones how to read, write, and catch a man — Teaching from experience? She's still up in those well-known clouds.

Speaking of Peg, Dick Leggee is running a plane route from Middleboro to Lakeville, so that he can get home in a hurry.

The Stone Twins, Louise and Lucy, have settled down to teaching girls at M. H. S. how to play basketball. And what able teachers they make!

Evelyn Fanjoy was Alice Marble's successor, but retired after the championship, to be an army wife. From all reports, it's a love match.

Art Spurrier was the lad from New Bedford who stole the girlish hearts at M. H. S. After making a name for himself as an athlete, he returned home to coach our would-be Harmons, and has just ruled girls eligible for football.

Jack Dunn, the town's leading undertaker, has a thriving business. His motto: "When Life is Done, see Jack Dunn."

Tiny Remillard and Cecilia Travassos, our littlest classmates, are in charge of the "Herring-Run Cafe," a ritzy joint by the clear Nemasket River. They specialize in "Little Alewives — fish to you."

Bill Washburn and Alton Kramer have gone into business together, taking parties on canoe trips up the river. They say business is good, and they are thinking of expanding their enterprise to fishing trips, too.

Eileen Murdock became Lakeville's gift to the world of art. She studies in Paris, Vienna, and Italy, but returned to Lakeville to paint the world's prettiest scenery right at home.

Vilho Jokinen was one of our quietest classmates, but after graduation he became a great orator. He now teaches at a large university and lectures extensively throughout the country. Can you imagine that?

Hughie Loheed is one member of the class of '42 who was "going places." Yes, he joined the Navy and saw the world. Now he has a girl in every port, but then didn't he always?

"Bev" Trites is a new hostess for Pan-American Airways. The company already has boosted its passenger list five per cent. With a fella in every city, she still can't make up her mind.

Lorraine Leighton. Remember the gal who had more circulation than the Saturday Evening Post? Well, when she grabbed a guy, she got a Buck.

Burton Niro, the Electrical Wizard, is killing people left and right. He's no superman: he pulls the switch at the death house.

Joe Moquin is an impersonator. He walks, talks, and looks like one. Joe is also champion hog-caller of Podunk Junction.

"Franny" Murphy has reached the ambition of his school days at M. H. S. He has won the shirt off a certain Harold Panesis.

Albert Carr is the proud possessor of a limousine which is sporting tires made from his large collection of girls' locks of hair.

Madeline Bell is working as private secretary to a law firm. She wears a thousand-dollar pearl necklace to work every day, trying to prove that there is such a thing as an "honest lawyer."

Walter Cassidy was undecided about joining up with the Army, the Navy, or Lillian. Now he is a 1st lieutenant in the Army, and his wife is very proud of him.

Carol Cushing's versatility is still apparent in 1962. She is the manager of Women's Athletics of the United States, and in her spare time she is teaching the Army (?) how to knit their own socks.

Rose Johnson. Now that the world's largest telescope has been completed in California, we find Rose star-gazing. Maybe it's the circumstances involved in "studying the stars" that appeal to her.

Shirley Keough, one of our fashionable girls, is a model for Hollywood's leading clothes designer. She is introducing a new color, Dartmouth Green.

Ruth Leonard is still following the same trend as in her high school days; she is now using her brains as the president of the Girls' College in Lakeville.

Barbara Shaw has just fulfilled her ambition to visit all the forty-eight states. She is now lecturing in her home town, Carver, on such new inventions and ideas as electricity, running water, radios, and bathtubs.

Florence Thompson's musical talent has reached the composition level. Her latest rendition was inspired by the Hammond Vibra-Tone.

Charles Shaw made such a hit as the discus-thrower in the Senior Play that he is now in Hollywood, where he is Betty Grable's chief rival for the title of the most beautiful legs in Hollywood.

Many members of our class are modern Florence Nightingales: Ernestine Washburn, Evelyn Wrightington, Margaret Norris, Helen Athanasiou, Lavinia Chase, and Caroline Drake. Martha Howard also became a nurse, and it is rumored that she has first place in the heart of Dr. Kildare.

George Gove is displaying his talent for business as the Censor Editor on the staff of Esquire.

Ivan Logan has recently been added to the staff of Esquire as head of the Complaint Department. This section had to be enlarged since the appointment of the new Censor Editor.

John Swanson, who received top rating at Harvard, has been appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Edward Boucher is starring on Broadway, now having the title role in "The Farmer Takes a Wife."

Roger Parent has put Carver on the map by inventing a device which will mash potatoes, shell peas, string beans, and wash floors. He's the answer to a housewife's prayer.

Warren Rogers' ambition to be a mechanic has at last been realized. He is the head mechanic in a Trombone Factory.

Bob Fish has recently incorporated Fish, Fish, and More Fish Diners with Braley's Candy Kitchen. He is working on the idea of a new service in his restaurants, that of developing and printing pictures while you eat.

Verna Salley's hobby of interior decorating has been put to good use. Since the war she has been given the job of refinishing and redecorating Buckingham Palace.

Patsy Chiuppi's fame is sweeping the country. He is a janitor in a Hollywood night club and has just invented an automatic floor sweeper.

Maynard Washburn went into partnership with Fred Carey some years ago. He has a good business and tells us he's "cleaning up"!

Arthur Standish is now in a corporation where there's a crank at the head with a lot of nuts underneath. He's working at the Ford Plant.

Earl Vigers is a farmer and a successful one at that. He's raising peanuts to feed to his elephants that are in his circus.

Lucy Hill opened up a Dancing Studio right next door to Arthur Murray. She put him out of business in a hurry.

Edith Shaw and her sister have taken over the A. R. Parker stand at the Rock. They are having a hard time keeping out of the red, because Edith "Lives to Eat."

Eddie Caswell, after serving with the Marines, opened up an Auto Repair Shop, where he attempts to tie together the Model A's of the High School boys.

Doris Freeman, whom we used to see carrying the teacher's supplies, has continued along this line and is now chief stock clerk for Sears and Roebuck's.

Naomi Haskins has taken her beautiful red hair to Broadway, where she is modeling hats in Saks Fifth Avenue.

Connie Heath, who has shown great talent as a secretary, is seen in 1962 as the private secretary to Neftel's popular coast-to-coast band.

Ferdinand LeBlanc left his trumpet at home under the bed and took up window washing as a career. His theme song is "Whistle while you wash!"

Edith Deane always tried to be true to Army and Navy both, but soon found it couldn't be done. So she went into business with the family, raising vegetables for the town. The sign out front reads, "Buy your beans from the Deanes."

Mary Duggan was always full of pep, vim, and vigor, and she now is the very popular Mascot for the Middleboro Varsity Club.

Millie Cushing is a private secretary to M. H. S. Her work seems to be keeping her on the "March."

Connie Maynard is a graduate nurse now. She says that some of the interns are so persistent they often "try her patients."

MIDDLEBORO

Band

LUTHER CHURCHILL, Director CONSTANCE SOUZA, Manager

ROBERT COWAN, LILLIAN JONES, Drum Majors

The Middleboro High School band is a favored activity under the competent direction of Luther Churchill. During the past school year the band played at several football games and for the Plymouth Shoe Company. This spring a demonstration of the various types of instruments was given by the band, with explanations by Mr. Churchill. Because of war conditions the band was unable to participate in the State Music Festival.

Third row: Eleanor Rogers, Elaine Tessier, Mary-Ann Alger, Ruth Kline, Lois Wood, Richard Glidden, Henry Sullivan, Jane Keith, Frederic Perry, Allan Ball, Howard Schofield, Jeanette Leighton, George Gove, Betty LeBlanc, Arleen Sullivan.

Basketball

ALFRED E. FARLEY, Head Coach HENRY E. BATTIS, Assistant Coach

CARLTON SHAW, Captain PATSY CHIUPPI, Manager

Middleboro High was represented by an inexperienced but aggressive team on the basketball floor. The players gaining experience during the season, the final record shows seven wins and eight losses.

First row: Ralph Spurrier, Leo Gauthier, Winthrop Winberg, Leo Gamache, Allan Ball, Leon Corsini, Ronald Mills, Francis Gill, Richard Drake, John Brooks, James McQuade, Manuel Sylvia, George Morris.

Second row: Jacob Kulian, Arthur Spurrier, John Sylvia, Robert Leary, William McMahon, Carlton Shaw, Walter Zidiales, Charles Varney, Alfred Menowsky, Paul Harrison, Eugene Savard.

Baseball

HENRY E. BATTIS, Head Coach ALFRED E. FARLEY, Assistant Coach

CHARLES VARNEY, Captain

Middleboro High School baseball team has a schedule of seven games this season. Although the opening game has not been played as the yearbook goes to press, the school should be well represented on the diamond by the members of the team.

First row: Robert Leary, Lawrence Carter, Donald Quagan, Charles Varney, Gordon Haskell, Richard MacNeil, John Carver, Warren Tharion.

Second row: Mr. Battis, Vernon Brooks, Eugene Savard, Allan Ball, William McMahon, Peter Drevinsky, Robert Maranville, Mr. Farley.

Girls' Hockey

EVELYN F. WHITTY, Coach
RUTH LEONARD, PAULINE WASHBURN, Co-Captains
CONSTANCE MAYNARD, MAMIE MACKIEWICZ, Co-Managers

The girls' hockey team, all good sports and fighting losers, under Miss Whitty's coaching were rewarded by well-contested games and a share in victories.

First row: Cecilia Travassos, Eileen Remillard, Elaine Tessier, Arleen Sullivan, Constance Draghetti, Lillian Jones, Carol Cushing, Ruth Leonard, Renee Ray, Lois Wood, Lillian Salley, Margaret Begley.

Second row: Ruth Kline, Beulah Powell, Elizabeth Pittsley, Arlene Corayer, Madeline Sisson, Natalie Dewhurst, Marjorie Waugh, Roberta Gross, Anna Evanoff, Ruth Hartling, Constance Heath, Evelyn Fanjoy.

Third row: Janette Spurrier, Barbara Fish, Mary Dores, Helen Tarr, Eleanor Rogers, Beverly Gay, Rose-Ann Savard, Alice-Marie March, Jeanne Mendall, Jeannette Atkins, Miss Whitty.

Fourth row: Isabelle Kennedy, Phyllis Greene, Virginia Alley, Virginia Grant, Mary Ann Alger, Georgina Alger, Ethel Sullivan, Lennie Lobl, Carolyn Braley, Marjorie Conant, Mamie Mackiewicz.

Absentees: Constance Maynard, Pauline Washburn, Eileen Murdock.

Girls' Basketball

EVELYN F. WHITTY, Coach
ARLEEN KINSMAN, CAROL CUSHING, Co-Captains
ELEANOR McLEOD, MARTHA HOWARD, Co-Managers

The 1941-42 basketball season for the girls proved to be about 50-50 in actual victories and defeats, but in good sportsmanship and fighting spirit it scored 100 per cent.

First row: Lillian Salley, Elaine Tessier, Arleen Kinsman, Carol Cushing, Lois Wood, Elizabeth MacDowell.

Second row: Beverly Shurtleff, Alice-Marie March, Rose-Ann Savard, Lillian Jones, Alberta Snow, Katherine Soule, Lorraine Leighton, Natalie Dewhurst.

Third row: Lillian Heleen, Eleanor McLeod, Jeanne Mendall, Madeline Sisson, Marjorie Waugh, Miss Whitty, Eleanor Southwick, Dorothy Fowler, Jeannette Leighton, Martha Howard.

Absentees: Mary Mackiewicz, Jeannette Atkins, Pauline Washburn.

The Sachem

MARGARET H. RYDER, LILLIAN M. O'NEIL, Faculty Advisers
JOHN SWANSON, Editor-in-Chief

The Sachem provides the students with a chance to use their abilities and show their interest in journalism. It is not, however, all work and no play. The S. M. L. S. P. meetings in the different member-schools always prove enjoyable to those who attend.

First row: Ruth Kline, Evelyn Fanjoy, Richard Leggee, Carol Cushing, George Gove, John Swanson, Jeanette Atkins, Robert Fish, Arleen Kinsman, Peter Drevinsky, John Halahan.

Salutatory and Essay

RICHARD E. LEGGEE

Superintendent of Schools, Members of the School Committee, teachers, parents, and friends, we welcome you to these our graduation exercises. We are glad that, in spite of the unsettled state of affairs and the many interruptions brought on by the war in which we are engaged, we are able to present our programme as usual.

AIR-COOLED AND LIQUID-COOLED AIRCRAFT ENGINES

The controversy between aeronauts over the relative merits of the liquid-cooled and air-cooled aircraft engines can be traced to World War I. In this melee a variety of radial, rotary, and liquid-cooled in-line engines played their parts. From the factories of the United States poured the famous "Liberty" water-cooled engines. France, Germany, and Austria had their own pet engines. In 1917 an inventor by the name of Lawrance introduced his own type of radial air-cooled engine to start the argument. He established the Lawrance Aero Engine Corporation and tried to interest the Navy in his engine.

Before I go further, I think I had better explain briefly the differences in principle and construction between the two engines in question, for the benefit of those who do not follow the air trails.

Perhaps when most of you think of an engine, you think of your automobile engine. The liquid-cooled aircraft engine is similar to the ordinary automobile engine. The cylinders, being individually cooled, are arranged in an in-line position. There are usually two banks, of six cylinders each. The liquid cooling compound used in place of water in the cooling system is composed of glycol, known to you by the name of Prestone. It is circulated by pumps through the jacket, expansion valves, and radiators. The cylinders, being placed in line, give the engine a small frontal area (no greater than a sitting man), which lends itself perfectly to streamlining. The fluid jacket around the cylinders may be punctured by bullets. This leads to the loss of the cooling fluid, overheating, and finally fire, and is the main objection to the liquid-cooled engine.

In the air-cooled engine the cylinders are arranged radially like the spokes of a wheel. This arrangement is used in order to expose as much surface as possible to the slip stream, since the excess heat is given off by radiation and conduction to the air. To increase the area thus exposed, cooling flanges, or fins, are cut into the cylinder head and walls. The large frontal area of this engine is the main objection to this type of engine. Recently this objection has been greatly reduced by the invention of a cowl which reduces the drag nearly to that of the liquid-cooled engine.

Before such cowls were developed, the Navy and Army were fighting hammer and tongs over which engine was the better. Through the efforts of William E. Boeing the Navy was induced to try the newly developed Pratt and Whitney air-cooled engine, built in collaboration with Lawrance. In the air races that followed, the Army, with its Curtiss D-12 water-cooled engine, was badly beaten. It immediately ordered a number of the Navy's miracle engines for itself. So continued the fight up until our present day, with the liquid-cooled engine slipping behind but not falling out.

In 1939 General Motors received an Army order for their Allison engine, a liquid-cooled model on which they had been experimenting for some years. This revived the old argument of liquid-cooled vs. air-cooled. The Navy stuck by its "built in head wind," while the Army was cooling its horses with liquids. The Bell Aircraft Corporation developed a bomber with "pusher" props and cannon pointing forward from the engine nacelle, also the P-39, a pursuit ship with a cannon firing through her nose, for this engine. All the while the Navy talked and worked. As a result, hot argument arose, and the Vought-Sikorsky fighter, powered with a 2000 H. P. air-cooled engine, appeared to whisk the Army off its feet. Until a few months ago the liquid-cooled still ruled the roost with the Army. Then came the Republic P-43 "Lancer," with the Navy's 2000 H. P. air-cooled furnishing the power. Development on the liquid has not and will not stop. In fact, from the latest data I was able to obtain, there seems to be in the experiment stage a 2000 H. P. liquid-cooled with a rating of about the same number of pounds per H. P. as the Navy's pride and joy.

Henry Ford became interested in liquid-cooled aircraft engines recently, and as a result has developed a V-12 engine with between 1500 and 1800 H. P. for mass production, weighing less than one pound per H. P.

As far as I have been able to learn, the two types of engines are running neck and neck at present for popularity and efficiency in the jobs they have to do. The air-cooled has the field of bombers and heavy aircraft to itself in the United States. The air-cooled is more easily mounted and repaired, and has a little edge in H. P. at present. The liquid-cooled has an edge in streamlining. The fact that it can be placed in an airship so as to favor armament is also in its favor. More even heat control tends to promote longer wear and better performance in the liquid-cooled engine. Finally, while there is still room for development, both liquid-cooled and air-cooled engines are excellent at their present stage and both are needed by America for victory.

JOHN A. SWANSON

THE SELF-INTEREST OF MANKIND

The present war, which has only begun to extract its toll of casualties, promises to be the costliest in human lives and human endeavor of all struggles that have yet been waged on the surface of the earth. Such destruction as we are now witnessing has been made possible by one thing alone — man's tremendous advancement in scientific knowledge and methods of application. One might well ask whether his improvements in communication and his partial mastery of natural forces have served only to make his wars world-wide and his weapons more devastating.

The conflict of nation against nation or of tribe against tribe dates back to the earliest recorded time. It is a natural result of greed and the desire for domination, which causes men to seek for more than they need in order that they may be secure in a world where every man is for himself. Greed cause men to seek for more than they need are waged for empire, indirectly those that are waged in revenge or for the purpose of overthrowing oppression. Differences in ideology cause war only when one nation attempts to impose its doctrines on another through the use of force. Even then, the ideology is usually a mask for hidden motives.

But although the causes of war are essentially the same as they always were, the manner of prosecution is different. In earlier times, attack and defense were more evenly matched. The fortified walls of a city were enough to discourage assault; shields could in part protect the individual soldier; combinations of shields, as in the Roman phalanx, protected whole armies; and the armor of a knight presented serious difficulties to the old-fashioned weapon. As time has progressed, however, attack has become more and more powerful, until at the present time it has become almost irresistible. Steel and concrete have to be very strong to withstand ton upon ton of explosive, and a detector must be very ingenious to aid materially in the destruction of submarines or of night bombers. Because of these facts attack has become defense, warfare has changed from the fighting of battles on a front by comparatively few men to a series of destructive assaults on and behind the lines of the enemy, attack and counter-attack, until one side has become unable to produce enough of the necessary materials. Under such conditions, it is not surprising that modern wars extract a greater toll of lives than previously was the case.

Another circumstance to be considered is the fact that all the people of a belligerent country are rendered combatants. A bomber cannot select its victims, and even women and children are not immune from its merciless destruction. The danger to the continuance of nations and of races is therefore real; and although it is now just beginning to be apparent, it will increase as new diabolical instruments of war are devised.

Consequently, the necessity of putting an end to all wars, from a purely practical standpoint, becomes evident. Many plans have been conceived having this as their object; and it is necessary that we give them all our most serious consideration, since the problem of war is the most pressing one of our age.

There are people who believe that only when one power or group of powers becomes permanently dominant in the world can lasting peace be secured. Theoretically, since no opposition would be possible under such conditions, there would be no possibility of conflict. Such an idea, however, is fallacious. If all that this power or combination of powers offers is peace, there will be no peace, no matter whether the government be oppressive or lenient. In the former case, revolt will finally come, supported no doubt by dissension in the ranks of the rulers themselves; this has always been the result of tyranny, slow at times, but sure. In the latter case, a breakup is also inevitable. A world-empire cannot be expected to succeed where smaller empires have failed. As the Roman empire declined, so would the world empire dissolve. This is true because of man's innate resistance to domination, even if certain advantages are obtained by it. For proof, one has only to turn to the Philippine desire for independence from the United States or the Norwegian desire for independence from Sweden.

A World Federation, formed with the consent of all its members, is another plan proposed for the elimination of warfare. The disadvantage here is that initial consent does not necessarily imply continued consent. The problem of secession would loom a hundred times larger than it did in our own United States. A federation does not obliterate sectional interests in the slightest degree: and if such interests were great enough to precipitate a struggle which almost destroyed our own comparatively small Union, after it had already enjoyed an existence of about seventy-five years, it is not hard to imagine the effect of such interests on a world state. Surely a world federation could not prevent war.

A world court plus a world police force to enforce the decisions of the court will have as little, if not less, effect, for the simple reason that there would be nothing to prevent the emerging of two combinations of powers with different views on a certain matter.

Although any of these aforementioned plans may help in the eventual elimination of war, they cannot do so in themselves, since they have no effect on the fundamental emotions of man which cause war. There must be a change in the character of man before there can be a considerable change in his actions. Some advocate an increased interest in religion to fill this need. This is a good beginning and may help greatly; but before religion can accomplish much, its doctrines must be relieved of their present unemployment.

The solution of the problem of war will come eventually. Mankind has made slow, but sure progress toward civilizing himself, and there is no reason to believe that he will not continue to do so. The cause of man's humanitarian tendencies is the ability to imagine himself in the position of the being upon whom he is about to bring harm. If the feeling is unpleasant, and there is no particular reason to do this harm, a man refrains. If the man's own interest, however, can best be served by accomplishing it, the feeling of unpleasantness is less powerful. A homely example is the lack of humanitarian sympathy with which a farmer views a crow. When, however, the two emotions act in unison, they are especially strong. For example, when a man realizes that by cheating his neighbor he will more likely be cheated himself, or that by killing his neighbor he will more likely be killed himself by someone else, he will form compacts with his neighbors outlawing such crimes. Although we ascribe somewhat loftier motives to our code of ethics, these emotions form the basis of it.

In like manner, when men come to realize that war brings only impoverishment, that war means the deterioration — not the improvement — of the racial stock through the killing off of millions of the finest men, that the gaining of unnecessary territory or monopoly means only that that territory or monopoly will have to be defended from attack at some future time, that the exploitation of a people means only that their eventual revenge will have to be faced, and that the very existence of nations is threatened by the use of improved weapons, then men will also realize that their own self-interest is best served not by war, but by the prosperity of their neighbors — and when men everywhere in the world begin to consider the prosperity of others as well as the prosperity of themselves, there can be no war, no matter what the political construction of the world may be.

VALEDICTORY

Members of the Class of 1942:

These graduation exercises have marked the official end of our education in the public schools. Within a few days we as a class will have completely dissolved, probably never to be fully united again. Our days of association together are over. But we must look to the future, not to the past: for it is in the future that we must prove that we are worthy of the friendly instruction and guidance our teachers have given us, and that we are deserving of their hopes for us.

No longer can it be said that there are no opportunities for the graduating student. We have more opportunities before us than have ever existed before, opportunities for service in every field. Some of us will join a branch of the armed forces; others will take civilian positions; still others will continue their education at some higher institutions of learning, after which their services may be more valuable; but it is clearly the duty of all of us to assist in some manner, however slight, in the great undertaking in which we are now involved. It is also our duty, whether or not we continue to go to school, to educate ourselves still further so that over all the difficult problems we shall face in later life, as well as over our present foes, we shall achieve ultimate victory.

Our Prayer

Dear Lord and Father of mankind,
Direct our youthful way.
The happy past we hope to bind
To glowing paths which ever wind
Through life we now survey.

A war-torn world now looks to us —
May youth its hope increase;
A fight for right give impetus
Our future to make glorious —
Let "Victory" bring us peace!
